Bring your next incentive tour to Iceland

Iceland – „Right Next Door“

A flight just 3- 4 hours will bring you from the middle of Europe to Keflavik international airport and the fascination of Iceland. ICELANDAIR and Iceland Express operate non-stop flights all year round from major European cities such as Berlin, Frankfurt, Amsterdam, London, Copenhagen, Paris, Stockholm and Oslo as well as from the US. We can also provide connecting flights from most other European cities.

Open 24 hours a day!

All year round, Reykjavik has the pulse of a capital that never sleeps, with its midnight sun during summer and spectacular Northern Lights (Aurora Borealis) in the winter. The international flair of this city is partly due to the delightful mixture of local tradition and worldwide culture in its restaurants, where you can experience fresh, healthy food from the sea as well as exquisite wild lamb and poultry dishes.

Iceland – on top of Europe!

From a geological point of view, Iceland is still a young country and is continually developing. Only 15-30 minute drive from Reykjavik, the northernmost capital on Earth, and you are surrounded by the truly majestic powers of nature. Geothermal hot springs, active volcanoes, glaciers, spectacular waterfalls or sea cliffs provide endless possibilities for team-building activities. A great advantage of Iceland is the short travelling distance between the city and the natural sights and activities.

Iceland offers everything you need to host outstanding meetings and conferences. Not only can we provide the highest standard of technical facilities, but comfort as well. Not to mention of course the unique Icelandic outdoors!

Be it river rafting, riding, super-jeep self drive tours in the wilderness, helicopter flights, a cocktail at the top of a glacier, or a game of golf in the midnight sun – winter and summer, Iceland ProTravel has the knowledge and skill to build the perfect trip.

Information about Iceland

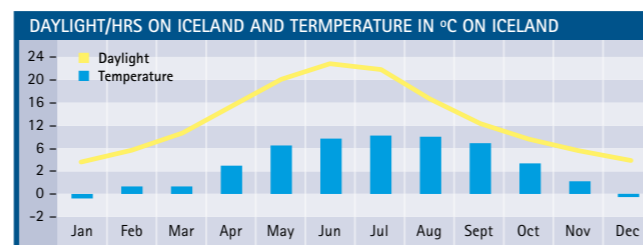

Iceland is a volcanic island, which originated only about 16 million years ago and is therefore one of Europe's youngest regions. The landscape is unique, with fjords, impressive waterfalls, bubbling geysers and gigantic glaciers as well as the wild highlands, partly resembling a moon landscape.

The country has a total area of 103,000 square km and is almost 2,5 times the size of Switzerland. With a coastline of 6000 km, Iceland extends 300 km from north to south and around 500 km from east to west. Iceland has around 300,000 inhabitants, of whom around 170,000 live in Reykjavik and its surroundings.

The Icelanders voted for the first democratically elected female head of state in 1980, Vigdís Finnbogadóttir. They are very open-minded and progressive and their standard of living is high. On the other hand they place great importance in their myths and ancient „sagas“. There is little difference between the Icelandic language of today and that spoken during the first settlement, but English is widely understood.

Climate

Although the warm Gulf Stream has a positive effect on the climate you should be ready for all kinds of weather. In summer, temperatures generally vary between 12° and 15° Celsius, though they may climb as high as 20°C. Rain showers are always possible, but Reykjavik's average rainfall is less than that in London for example. Temperatures in winter are around +/- 5°C; and, even though it can be very windy, it is not as cold as often assumed.
